Antideuterons are expected to be a cosmic ray component. The theoretical flux is too small to be observed by any of the past experiments. The sensitivity of AMS-02 will allow for antideuteron search. Discovery of antideuterons in the cosmic ray flux in Earth orbit might signalize the annihilation of neutralinos in the Dark Matter halo of the Galaxy.